"Shepherd's Bridge" Is Christmas Masque

A masque with such unusual technique as "The Shepherd's Bridge" needs an unusual producer—one who, besides experience and creative vision, has certain ideals about Christmas and the way things should be done at Christmas time. A Christmas play should be approached in the manner of the mediaeval—with the spirit from which sprang the old morality plays. It should give the audience both the thrill of reverence and the robust impulse toward joy. The man who directs a Christmas play has to be something more than a director; he is putting on something more than a show; he is interpreting ceremonially the sentiments and feeling of a community.

John Hilliard is going to produce "The Shepherd's Bridge" for us this Christmas. We are fortunate. We have an unusual play and an unusual director to produce it. We have also a strong cast of players, all enthusiastic and willing to give their time and strength at a season of the year when time is precious. Thomas Vincent Cator has generously promised to direct the singing and the music. Miss Tonia and Christine Burton will work out the dances. Edward Kuster and Lewis Josselyn will do the lighting; Mrs. Rhoda Johnson, the costumes; Dr. Burton, the stage set. Both Mrs. Johnson and Dr. Burton are in need of voluntary helpers—people that can sew, people that can drive in nails are more welcome than Santa Claus at this moment.

Carmel's Business District

Expanding—Dolores Street

Dolores street, between Ocean and Eighth avenues, shows signs of becoming a part of Carmel's business district. The new postoffice was the opening wedge; next came the rumor of an apartment building on the lot north of it, and now contractor Percy Parkes is planning to erect a store and office structure on the next block north.

Parkes will occupy a portion of the building in connection with a firm of Los Angeles realtors, and the remaining offices will be fitted up to suit tenants. The building is to be of Spanish architecture, more particularly the Mission style, with a low tiled roof and other features consistent with this environment.

City Dads Will Move

The Carmel public, the trustees and other city officials will have much more commodious quarters in the postoffice building. Moving day will be around the first of the year. The rent will be $40 a month, $480 a year. Who said "Build a city hall?"

Kites Visiting Carmel

Shirley Kite and son Peter arrived here last Wednesday from New York to spend the winter. She is an illustrator for children's stories in McCall's and the Pictorial and does a great deal of the advertising for Colgate & Co. She is an old friend of the Botkes. Her husband will join her here shortly.

Johan Hagemeyer, pictorial artist, has returned to Carmel for the holidays. He has done several beautiful studies of local subjects. His portraiture is particularly pleasing.

The local public school and the Monterey high school closed yesterday for the Christmas vacation. Both schools open on Tuesday, January 2.

Mason Schlosser was in town this week on business connected with the Ocean avenue improvement.

Do You Believe in Santa Claus?

Of course the people of Carmel believe in Santa Claus, as all sensible people do, which is one of the reasons why they are making great preparations against his secret coming this year. It is one of the reasons why Ira Remsen wrote his Christmas Masque, and it is one of the reasons why Arts and Crafts folk are going to make next Saturday a sort of festival in honor of Santa Claus. But while we all believe in the old fellow with the "little round belly," many of us have lost the thrill we got in the days when knobby stockings hanging from the mantel shelf was all the proof we needed that Santa Claus had been there. To recapture something of that freshness of the imagination that was ours in the "Golden Age," to give a fillip to the Yuletide spirit, the Pine Cone reprints the famous Christmas editorial from the New York "Sun."

A word about this editorial. Some years ago—on December 21, 1897, to be exact, a little Brooklyn girl, Virginia O'Hanlon, wrote to the "Sun," asking if there were still a Santa Claus. Francis P. Church, then leading editorial writer of the paper, wrote a reassuring editorial letter to satisfy her that there is a Santa Claus. That editorial has become literature. It is the classic defense of Santa Claus. For more than a quarter of a century newspapers all over the country are accustomed to reprint this editorial at Christmas time. The Pine Cone follows this custom.

Is There a Santa Claus?

We take pleasure in answering at once and thus prominently the communication below, expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of the "Sun."

"Dear Editor: I am eight years old. Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus. Papa says if you see it in the 'Sun' it's so. Please tell me the truth; is there a Santa Claus?"

"Virginia O'Hanlon,"
Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the scepticism of a sceptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds.

All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to our life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance, to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The external light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch all the chimneys on Christmas eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are, unseen and unseeable in the world.

You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

"The Play's the Thing"

in the Local Public School

Sunset School celebrated Christmas yesterday afternoon with an entertainment given to parents and visitors. The seventh and eighth grades gave a small play, "A Christmas Box From Aunt Jane." The fifth and sixth grades presented "Which Shall Be King," and the lower grades still another, taken from nursery rhymes. The singing of carols, readings and recitations rounded out a very happy afternoon.

The Bridge—Not of Size

A new bridge now spans Eighth avenue between San Antonio avenue and Scenic Drive. It was put in, so Joseph Blethen says, to improve navigation between his study at the Westaway cottage and the rest of the United States.

Blethen says he knows that he is liable to prosecution by the city trustees for blocking Eighth avenue, but avers that if the trustees can find the street he will move the bridge. Furthermore, the bridge is high enough to permit navigation up and down the stream during rainy weather.

W. H. P. Hill, the builder for Blethen, says it's a draw-bridge—probably drawn from imagination.

Both owner and builder have their bail money ready.

Property Owners Grant Rights-of-Way to Straighten Coast Road

In order to avoid dangerous turns, steep grades, the crossing of canyons, and to provide for as little bridge building as possible on the new Carmel-San Simeon highway, it has been found necessary in many cases for the State Highway Commission to ask for rights of way through private property.

So far rights of way have been granted by the following property owners: H. A. Laffer, A. V. Castro, J. W. Post, J. M. and F. Z. Pfeiffer, B. Pfeiffer, N. H. Davis, C. F. Post, Jose De La Torres, J. de Angulo, J. H. P. Atkins, Edgar Archer, O. A. Pendergrass, W. C. Copley, Annie Crette, Anna M. Ronning, Mrs. Teresa Johnson, Harry Greenleaf, Jens Sorensen, J. H. Bray, J. D. Veach, H. M. Madson, Mrs. T. M. Lynn, Mary C. Norris, William Casey, W. C. Fade, Mrs. Mary E. Cooke, B. H. Blair, Ruth L. Griswald, Anna E. Smith and Norman Ellsworth.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Blethen have gone to San Francisco to meet Mrs. Blethen's brother, E. B. Davidson of Cleveland, Ohio, who will spend the winter in Carmel.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred R. Beecholt are spending a few days in San Francisco. They will motor home with the Blethens next week.

Coming Production of "High Justice"

Early in the new year Miss Mae Harris Anson's play "High Justice" will go into rehearsal. Some of the actors have already been tried out and are studying their parts, which promises well for the performance.

Miss Anson is a graduate of the Boston Conservatory for elocution; she was for some years a public reader noted for an unusually flexible voice. This outlet was stopped when she became deaf. Miss Anson then went into newspaper work. For sixteen years she held a staff position on the Minneapolis Journal. For this paper she originated and edited a unique children's supplement, "The Journal Junior for children, by children," an eight-page paper which became widely known all over the state and even farther afield. It definitely connected literature and art with work in the public schools and was openly acknowledged and acclaimed by teachers and superintendents. Dr. Cyrus Northrop considered it "a wonderful opportunity for moulding the entire rising generation of the Northwest." Miss Anson's health broke down. Instead of going to a sanitarium she went to France and was abroad two years doing special work feature and fiction for the "Bellman."

"High Justice" is Miss Anson's first play; she does not intend that it shall be the last. When it comes to the point of writing from her own experience she will have fine material to draw from. The definite intention of writing plays with the knowledge that they will be tried out and that one can learn from experience is what we want of writers in Carmel. It centralizes the need of the theater to be built—it gives the players the incentive to work—it makes the theater itself more of a reality in relation to life.

New County Officials Give Out Names of Assistants

Sheriff elect W. A. Oyer, who takes office early next month, announces a partial list of deputies, as follows: George W. Holm of Salinas, Carl Abbott of King City and A. Bordges. A deputy from the Monterey Peninsula will be appointed later.

Albert E. Warth, district attorney-elect, will have as his chief deputy W. C. Thole of Salinas. Fred Treat of Monterey will continue as deputy in this section.

Miss Ramona Rianda and Miss Anne Conrad will be deputies under the new Recorder John E. Wallace.

Etchings To Be Chosen

Subscribers for etchings, contributed for the purchase of the etching press, are asked to come to Arts and Crafts Hall tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 to choose their prints. This will be done by drawing lots. The following artists have contributed prints:

Ralph M. Pearson, Ferdinand Bergdorff, Dorothy Vedder Wegg, M. De Neale Morgan, Caroline Blackman, Dr. A. E. Burton, Josephine M. Culbertson, and Cornelius Botke.

Jessie Armes Botke will contribute two small decorative pictures.

Thousands of Peninsula Views Will Be Sent Broadcast

All over the Peninsula interest is aroused in "Postcard Week," December 24-30. Much inquiry has been made concerning a special card for the occasion. There will be no special card this year. It has been decided by the committee to request that views already printed and on sale be broadcasted throughout the land.

A placard announcing "Peninsula Postcard Week" is now on display in stores and other public places.

Sudden Death of Senator Rigdon

Our State Senator, Elmer S. Rigdon, passed away in San Francisco on Thursday evening. He contracted a severe cold a short time ago and went to the city to consult a specialist for deafness. His death was entirely unexpected.

The Senator was always an advocate of good roads, and best monument to his memory will be the Carmel San Simeon highway, for which he worked and fought. The Pine Cone suggests that stretch of this wonderful highway be named Rigdon Boulevard.

Rigdon was born in Cambria, San Luis Obispo county, 64 years ago. He is survived by a wife, a son, and three brothers.

Governor Stephens will name Rigdon's successor.

Davis Market to Open Today

The big new Davis market in Monterey opens today. The proprietor plans to give the peninsula a real department store of food products.

Instant popularity is anticipated by its owner, who bases his optimism upon the central location, the variety and quality of the goods he carries, values to be offered, and his display and sanitation features.

He has an up-to-date refrigeration plant for his meat department, and assures the public that he will carry only the best and freshest of goods.

His groceries is complete, easy of access, and prices are plainly marked. He is a grocer of known ability on the peninsula and will probably make as great a success in Monterey as he did in Carmel.

SHOPS WITH ATMOSPHERE AND QUALITY

Ye Olde Shop is full of lovely suggestions for Christmas. Is there a woman who doesn't love a doll? Mrs. Yard is showing some of the quaintest old-fashioned dolls that ever made a feminine heart thrill. She also has some of Mrs. Lawler's marvelous Chinese importations, and in her antiques may be found the most interesting things about here. Her hand-craft toys and other novelties should be very attractive to the Christmas shopper.

Miss L. R. Lichtenhaler's studio is bright with gay Indian blankets and rugs, which she obtains direct from the Navajo reservation. Everyone who spends a half-hour looking over her large assortment of interesting colors and patterns is surprised to find that the prices are much lower than city prices. This is because Miss Lichtenhaler deals directly with the producers and therefore is enabled to give the public the benefit of her special arrangements. An Indian rug would surely be a splendid Christmas gift.

Russia's Christmas Comes Late.

In Russia Christmas occurs 13 days after our own. Perhaps one of the most interesting customs of the season is the Russian Christmas feast, for old and young alike, for which they dress themselves in various masquerading costumes and visit house after house, accepting the hospitality of their neighbors. The Christmas season is also notable for the fact that the young girls try to find out whether they will be married during the ensuing year or not. Some of them at twelve o'clock on Christmas Eve, secretly go out into the street and ask the first man they meet what his name is. Whatever name he gives will be that borne by their future husbands—such is the belief. Some of the girls are very much disappointed when the name is not a nice one, or when the man, as he will sometimes, calls himself Satan or something similar.

BOAR'S HEAD AT CHRISTMAS

Ancient Custom Which Is Now Believed to Be Observed Only at Oxford University.

RINGING in the boar's head at Yuletide is not celebrated widely in Great Britain today, and probably the only place where it survives with something of its old-time glory is Queen's college, Oxford university.

The custom is believed to antedate Christianity; in fact, is said to have come down to Englishmen from the Druids, the Detroit News recalls. Freya, goddess of peace and plenty, was always represented as riding a boar, and the Druid priests are believed to have made yearly sacrifices of boars to this divinity in order to win her good will.

At Queen's the procession of the boar's head forms in the buttery. A soloist, who usually is a former student of the college, heads the line. Behind him march two or three broad-shouldered youths who bear the boar's head, mounted on a silver salver. In the old days the head weighed as much as eighty pounds.

Flags and pennants of the college flutter about the head, which is crowned with gilded sprays of rosemary, bay, laurel and other evergreens. A lemon or an orange, the old Norse symbol of plenty, is placed between the tusks.

Behind the bearers of the salver march the surpliced men and boys of the choir and the organist in a robe of an Oxford doctor of music.

On a dais at the end of the dining hall the provost and the principal guests stand. The provost says grace in Latin; the call to dinner is sounded with trumpets through the cloisters and the procession starts through the cloisters.

Origin of the Word Yule.

Many explanations are given of the origin of the word Yule. One of the most probable is that it is derived from the ancient Gothic word, giul or hiul, the origin of our word wheel. The Yule festival is said to have received its name from being the turning-point of the year—when the sun apparently turns back from the south and begins to set each evening farther and farther to the north until in June it goes down almost in the northwest. In the old clog almanacs of the Middle Ages a wheel is the device used for marking Yule-tide or Christmas.

Asparagus Oldest Food Plant.

Asparagus is believed to be the oldest known plant used for food.

CHRISTMAS DOES NOT STAND ALONE

IF CHRISTMAS stood alone it would be an idle mockery. But it does not stand alone. It is part of a year. Yet it is a peculiar part. It is that brief period in which the child rules the world.

It marks nowadays the culmination of a civilization which has had a leading principle. The selfish, the hard, the grasping and the unsparing are out and apart that one week from the great flowing tide of the development of the world's progress. The man or woman who does not know this or see it or feel it is alien to the Christian spirit and to all the products wrought by the Christ spirit in the twenty centuries last past.

Christmas day, then, brings a message. But it also sings a song of hope and calls aloud a prophecy. The message is that gentleness is stronger far than force and that the greatest power on earth is the compelling power of tenderness.

Every Christmas tree is lit with that light. The great flood of presents bears this as its message. The cheer and charity of the whole season are fed by this love.

If the result of this process is only a century flower, however, or one that blooms even only once a year, then of what use is this more than that, this grotesque fact than that strange plant? It is a curious phenomenon only, a hothouse spectacle and not an abiding food product.—Rev. Dr. David M. Steele, Philadelphia.

Frankincense From Francesca

Once again the enchanting mystery. First, Ann Burroughs to tease and tantalize, then Albert Crane to mix everybody up, Pixie-like, and now comes Francesca.

Last week the Pine Cone published a call for a criticism of the plays given on Friday and Saturday nights of last week.

Francesca is courageous enough to say the bad things and gracious enough to temper them with the good things, and, unlike many critics, she furnishes food for thought.

We're for her.

By FRANCESCA

For the first time in—goodness knows when, perhaps it is the first time in history—the entire evening of the Little Theatre was devoted to comedy. Shocking! In Carmel, city of highbrows. Yet even the hardened first nighters forgot the discrepancy before the evening was over. Those few who had brought their ever-ready hammers discreetly concealed them and laughed with the rest. Not that either of the plays were exactly low-brow. Still, when one considers a whole program of comedy by the Little Theatre, one feels that perhaps that they are doing something a bit—well, unconventional is not just the word—but you hardly expected it of them.

The difficulties of this unprecedented non-intellectual procedure, however, were nicely overcome by the choice of plays, both of which were relieved from too much comedy by other dramatic elements—the first of pathos, the second of tragedy.

"Cranford," a three act play by Mrs. Gaskell, was produced by Mrs. Mary E. Hand, and I, for one, nominate her to the Hall of Fame. The exquisite picture created by lighting, setting and costume was never once spoiled by an awkward movement or cross, though there were as many as ten people on the stage at a time within a very limited space and the stage did not give the effect of being crowded. The whole thing was so simple, so natural, that one forgot for the moment that one was watching a play, and lived in a world of bouret, hoop skirt and pantalette.

The costumes alone were a treat to those who love old things. Most of them were not merely costumes, but were things actually worn by ladies of that day. Certainly the Paisley shawls and the wonderful old lace were inimitably real. But costumes alone cannot make a play, nor can lighting or setting or directing. All of these must be combined with good acting to create real atmosphere; and good acting was not lacking. Several men were mentioned, but only one appeared in the action of the play, so Mr. Hand was alone in his glory, but proved himself capable of carrying the responsibility.

Of the women's parts, all were convincingly played. Especially I would like to mention Miss Mattie, who provoked a laugh one minute and a lump in your throat the next; of Miss Betty Barker, who had such a delightful sense of humor; of Lady Glenmere, she of the intriguing Scotch accent; and of Miss McLean, who for once was allowed to play something other than a tragedy part.

The popular idea of a criticism seems to link that word to advice. Hence, when the curtain rose on the next play, I felt it my duty to discover some way of applying the rule, if for no other reason than that I wished to be considered a real critic. As the play progressed, my ambition gradually vanished. At my earliest opportunity I looked up "criticism" in the dictionary—a la Miss Pole—and found that it means "to pass judgment upon the merits of a literary or artistic performance." So I may say what I think and still not violate the written law—of criticism?

To begin with, I have always harbored serious doubt concerning the producing possibilities of Lady Gregory's comedy, "Spreading the News," the cast of which is large for a stage like that of Arts and Crafts, the lines being written in such a way that the action is liable to move so swiftly as to cause the audience to lose the thread of the story, or, in an attempt to overcome this, to drag it, in a way that would rob it of humor and sprightliness.

Mrs. Bostick, as director, produced a result that was neither of these. The action ran smoothly and every line got over. Besides this, there was atmosphere; and the picture, while entirely different from the first play, was equally as beautiful. The tragic and comic elements were not lost in a jumble of words, as might have been expected from their being combined in this act.

There were no leads. Mrs. Tarpey, the apple woman; Mr. and Mrs. Fallon, and Red Jack Smith shared honors. Miss Helena Conger is a newcomer here and a happy acquisition to our dramatic forces. It is no exaggeration to say that Geane Hansen, Gerald Morrow and John Jordan did their best work of this season.

Both plays had real atmosphere, and both casts proved themselves worthy of the confidence placed in them. The worst that can be said is that in "Cranford" a few cues were missed, which necessitated much prompting. In "Spreading the News" one or two of the characters fell down on the Irish brogue.

Last, but not least, let me mention the lighting effects, which have so much to do with the atmosphere of a play and the state of mind of the audience. Not enough credit has been given in the past to the men who sit up nights working on new effects, and to Mr. Kuster in particular, who has made a study of these things and who has been so generous in giving his time and lending his valuable apparatus to supplement the meagre mediums for lighting now in the hall.

Mr. Kuster's advent into Carmel's dramatic world marked for us a new epoch. It is he who revolutionized the lighting of the Forest Theatre, and although "Caesar and Cleopatra" was quoted by some one as being "a magnificent failure," and that some one was considered by many as being very unfair, it will be noted that even the party of the first part included the word "magnificent," and we take it that he used this word to describe the lighting.

Practical and Unique-- Modern and Antique-- Found in Carmel Shops

Carmel is a place where fairy tales come true. Ten years ago we had a little candy store, a grocery, a bakery, a drug store and a butcher shop that was open twice a week for an hour or so. Then Perry Newberry got busy with that old magician, Aladdin, who rubbed his lamp, and now we rub our eyes and exclaim at what's happened. Alice in Wonderland has supplied us with everything from cabbages to Kings. Cinderella has come to life and changes the girls in a twinkling from cinder sweeps to brilliant-hued princesses. Jack has climbed up his beanstalk and found three groceries where one grew before and where beans and butter are equally commonplace. Mr. Ross has put on the seven-leagued boots and given us a market with up-to-date equipment and first class meats.

Instead of one candy store we have two. Ivy Basham smiles at her customers over a modern counter and behind glass cases containing the finest and gayest of Christmas boxes and the sweetest and most toothsome of candies and ices. Her shop is hotney and comfy and it is a pleasure to sit in one of her little attractive booths and eat one of her good lunches.

Delos Curtis has added an attractive restaurant to his establishment, and the members of Carmel's Bohemia are rapidly making the place their headquarters. He serves the best seventy-five cent dinner to be found in the U. S. A. From 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. the hungry resident or visitor may find appetizing and substantial food prepared hygienically and served daintily. Curtis makes his own candies; he uses the best materials and his prices are always right.

It is hard to understand why Carmelites ever go out of town to buy their bread and cakes and pastry. One would look a long time to find a better bakery than we have right here and the prices are not a cent higher than those in Monterey.

Not behind the other stores in color and beauty are our groceries. If we must eat, let us buy that which satisfies the eye as well as the palate.

There are golden-skinned pumpkins at Newell's and red cranberries running out of overturned barrels and lollypops in the form of fancy prunes in five-pound boxes and assorted glazed fruit in attractive cartons.

Edler & Ward have a new window with a rustic fence which furnishes an appropriate background for their decorative wicker baskets filled with fruits and nutmeats. They also have some of the new California redwood boxes containing assorted fruits and sweetmeats.

Ernest Schweninger has some glorified caudied apricots which have been kissed by the sun, and his dried figs packed in fancy cartons would appeal to the most epicurean taste.

Everyone in Carmel needs sometime to have a watch or clock adjusted. It can be done now right here. Charles Frank is an expert in that branch of work, and he also keeps a really beautiful line of jewelry and silverware that would do credit to a metropolitan house.

A bit of the Orient can be found in the bright-hued Oriental store kept by Miss Hunkins. She has a bewildering array of Christmas novelties, and her place gives an interesting dash of color to our main street. There are real old Chinese embroideries, quaint jewelry, and beautiful lacquer. Her window contains a remarkable combination of beads, a candle and a vase, all of Chinese blue. If one could use them all in a costume, it would be a symphony in blue.

Stella Guichard also has some interesting windows which give more than a hint of the coming of Santa Claus.

Dr. J. E. Beck, our first druggist, is still on the corner dispensing prescriptions and postcards with equal zeal. His Christmas stock is well selected and is worth looking at before buying elsewhere.

When Aladdin rubbed that old lamp, the Palace Drug Store sprang into existence, and our good friend Tom Eickle became guardian of its treasures. Tom is also general counselor to those suffering from ills of the flesh. He'll diagnose the case over the counter, prescribe and cure in less time than it takes to tell it, and he'll do it to the latest jazz record from an up-to-date victrola, and while your eye is attracted by the beautiful toilet articles which he has stocked up with so lavishly. His is a general household emporium. There are all kinds of good smokes, phonograph records, perfumes for milady, late magazines, and whatnot. And it's next to the Pine Cone office.

R. G. Leidig is one of the old timers, an aggressive business man, accommodating and conservative. Everyone here knows that Bob is running a Holman hardware, electric lights, household utensils, dishes, can be bought there as easily and as cheaply as in any large city. Then Bob does great things with those Hoover sweepers. It is rumored that he can sweep the cobwebs right off of the moon, and that he is under contract with the city to keep the new concrete road free from dust during the summer. You know his slogan, "It beats—as it sweeps—as it cleans."

"Cabbages and Kings" is a modern shop with the quaintness, charm and atmosphere consistent with its environment. Here you may find distinctive merchandise—art novelties, men's furnishings, women's sweaters and kimono, "Meadowbrook" hats and Jaeger branch, and that anything in the way of woolens. It is probably on imported goods that Mr. Glassel lays most stress. He keeps in close touch with the New York markets and gives us golf hose, tweeds and homespun from Scotland and Ireland, blankets and hooked rugs from Canada, and Cashmere sweaters from the Shetland Isles, and many other articles gleaned from diverse and interesting countries.

We are indeed a little community, sufficient unto ourselves. We have nothing else to wish for, unless it be a theater, and even that now is in a formative state. Aladdin doesn't need to perform any more tricks. We're all right just as we are.

Through Giftland with Billie, the Johnnies and the Pine Nut

'Twas a great party we had the other day—my new friend Billy—by the way, it's a her-Billy—and the two Johnnies and I.

Billy has bought her a house—it's an old one, but she's going to remodel it and dress it all up and make a real home out of it, so she went over the hill with me to look around on her own account, while I was attending to business. Before we started, we saw Johnnie Bartlett and Johnnie Campbell, ambling up the street.

"Hello, Johnnies," sez I. Johnnie Bartlett smiled and tipped his hat like the gentleman that he is. Johnnie Campbell grinned toothlessly.

"Come on over to Monterey and let's have a party. You'll have a ride, some good grub and a movie show. What do you say?"

They were quick with a "Yes," and after the mothers had been placated, we started. Billy took the front seat and the boys scuffled into the back. We held varied converse on the way. Johnnie Bartlett insisted that he saw a flock of deer on his last trip over, and Billy worried about what kind of a stove she was going to get.

She's got more faith in me than she has any business to have. It's an awful responsibility this having to advise new people where to shop, but I felt that I was safe in taking her to the Monterey Electric Shop and in recommending one of their wonderful electric ranges. There's nothing to do to them but play with the buttons—no coal or wood to carry in—no oil to monkey with—just a twist of the wrist and the heat is on. She fell for one and we left happy and content.

The kids were down the street, with their eyes glued to Cummings' window. There were some lovely trays that fascinated Johnnie Bartlett. He finally chose one with real butterflies showing under the glass, and ordered it kept until Christmas to surprise his mother. (Hope she doesn't see this.) Cummings has a fine stock this year. All kinds of jewelry, and art novelties by the score. He has some really good hand-painted china, and rare and beautiful designs in silver.

We were away down near the wharf and that salty smell had made us all hungry, so we retraced our steps and landed at Siddall's Cafeteria. That's the place where you eat with a come-again appetite. It is so large and roomy and clean and attractive and the food is so well cooked and tasty that you're apt to overdo if you're not careful. We had a real family party and those kids ate so much that I had to make a touch from a friend. It's one place in Monterey where you can always find some one you know. It's like a real community home. Everybody sits and laughs and jokes and visits after his meal. The proprietor specializes in a new brand of home atmosphere. He says:

"We'll give you real home cooking at popular prices and you can act just as you would in your own home—visit, talk, smoke."

I believe he'd even allow a well-behaved dog to enter. After we were all ready to go, Johnnie Campbell decided to have another piece of pie. I hesitated—for some more of Johnnie's teeth seemed to be shaky, but Siddall's pastry is flaky enough, not only to suit the most epicurean of tastes, but the most evanescent of bicuspid—so we took the chance. Johnnie came through all right, and we tore ourselves away.

I wanted Billy to see one of the most interesting of the Monterey shops so I piloted my family down to that lovely old adobe that Miss Brouhart has lately remodeled for her Specialty shop. Verily, it is a woman's paradise. Its quaint architecture, simple fittings and well chosen stock furnish a lure not only to the Christmas shopper but to the all-year-round buyer who is attracted by the rare and beautiful.

Billy and the boys would have stayed there all day, but I had other fish to fry, so I yanked them all out and we sauntered once more down Alvarado. Our Johnnies were gazing longingly at the photos in front of the Strand. Billy bought their tickets and some candy and gum, which was given to the toothless one, accompanied with much sound advice, and we sent them in with instructions to meet us after the show at the Oyster Loaf.

"Say, Nut," sez Bill, "who'll I get to do that wiring for me?" I steered her round to the S. J. Tice, Electric shop, where she made her arrangements with a nice man who was both courteous and businesslike. They guarantee their work for a year and have a reputation on the Peninsula for fair dealing and good workmanship.

I knew my friend was going to have a lot of furniture of all kinds to buy, so I took her to the Climax Furniture Co. and left her there to browse around while I chased up the F. and N. Sign Co. at 519 Munras avenue. One of the merchants in Carmel had asked me to dig up a place where he could get a classy sign lettered. I found that these fellows are fully equipped to do all classes of work. If it's a sign, they do it—for indoors, for outdoors—big or little—plainly commercial or roughly artistic. Just tell 'em what you want to advertise and where you want to put it, and they'll do the rest. They won't indulge in useless conversation; they just make signs.

When I returned for my friend, she was enthusiastic about the large stock of goods the Climax handled.

"Why should I go to San Francisco," she sniffed. "I can buy anything here that I can buy there and I can get it for almost half the price."

"But say, honey," she added—she's a very affectionate girl—"I've a lot of lovely old chairs and couches in that house that just need re-covering. Isn't there any place around here where they do such things?"

I fairly chortled at her.

"Get into this Lizzie of mine and I'll show you a real find." In a few minutes I jammed on the brake at the Peninsula Upholstery and Drapery Company in New Monterey. I know Mr. Vosel pretty well—he had put the new top on my car for me—and it was in that way I learned that his real specialty is the reupholstering of old furniture. He remodels and recovers, handles drapery goods, renovates auto tops and cushions and claims to give the same quality of work as one may get by sending to interior decorating houses. Billy was delighted to find that by no effort and small expense, she could create things of real beauty out of those lovely quaint old chairs that she had expected to throw onto the woodpile.

The afternoon was wearing along and by the time we joined the boys at the Oyster Loaf, there was a chill in the air, so we had a hot drink all around. You can always get anything you want at the café—any time. It is open all day and pretty nearly all night. It's quiet and restful and the service is unexcelled.

When I've spent a day shopping in Monterey I always have to top it off with a trip up to the Monterey Nursery. It is the old Charles Rollo Peters place and commands a magnificent view of Monterey, with its shore line blending into the sand dunes and distant mountains. They have a wonderful assortment of trees and shrubs for winter planting, and just now their conservatories are fairly bursting with the color and fragrance of the Christmas season. The boys' eyes were nearly popping out of their heads at sight of the gorgeous blooms, and if I hadn't have reminded Billy very severely of that house that has yet to be finished, she'd have gone home broke.

It didn't cost us anything to go out and watch the sunset, so we did that, and then we came on home by the new road that leads direct from the nursery through the Romie Jacks subdivision and on to the main highway of Carmel hill.

When Billy and I parted with our gentlemen friends in front of the Pine Cone office, John expressed his appreciation of the trip in language befitting a highbrow, and Johnnie showed me all the places where his teeth had been, in one radiant smile, then ran down the street after his dad who was in the office. Then I went in to the Palace Drug Store and asked Tom Bickle to play "The End of a Perfect Day" for me.

BOOKS AND AUTHORS

By Ann Burroughs

FREDERICK FAUST'S FIRST FLIRTATION WITH FAME

"The Village Street and Other Poems" is Frederick Faust's first bow to the world of bound volumes. Frederick Faust is a young Californian yet in his twenties who has made the making of literature his profession since his college days when he was the unspoiled though universally admired poetic hope of the University of California. Mr. Faust's poetry is especially interesting to Carmelenoes both because he has been a visitor here and because he is close akin to our fellow townsman, Mrs. Henry Clay Wallace.

This first volume of poems is full of beauty and full of promise for a happy development. Mr. Faust is content to see beauty in simple things and simplicity in beauty. He presents three classes of poems—lyrics, children's verse and one long narrative poem.

The lyrics are short songs fraught with poignancy and beauty. "To a Lady," for instance, he says:

It is not you. You are the precious glass
Through which I peer and far away behold
A star washed by the loneliness of heaven.

And for "A Song" he writes:

When almond trees are sweet
With blossoms pale as foam,
We'll walk together to the church
And walk together home;

Is falling slowly, spirit soft,
On you and me, my dear;

Some evening when the w... rushed
And both our hearts are still

Some evening when the almond bloom,
The earliest of the year,
Should hold so little ill.

There is a delicacy and charm in his children's verse. From "Little Men" we quote:

The king of all the goblins then would sit above my bed
On a throne of solid moonshine with a crown upon his head
In the middle of a nightmare that is full of awful eyes—
Goblins running, goblins flying, all with fearful cries.
But the little men of midnight can never work you ill
If you cross your fingers tightly and lie there very still. . . .

And from "Fairyland":

For fairies spend their winters in the moon,
But in red strawberry and cherry time
They put their coats of crimson on and climb
Below the stars to forests where they make
The whistling in the wind, or on the lake
Run down the star paths, though we only see
The twinkle where their dancing feet must be.

"Balin," his long narrative poem, has been charmingly successful. Mr. Faust has sustained the traditional chivalric illusion of mystic other-worldliness of beauty, adventure, and plaintive sorrow. The incident of Balin's life which provides the story of the poem is arresting. The epic decorations are attractive. We quote at random some of the decorations:

Meantime, through twilight forest dolorous
The Lady Nerys drifted bright, her sleeves
Of crimson weighed with golden apples rich,
Her gown a deeper blue than evening hills.
Joyous she went forgetful of her brother,
And lost in hardy Balin at her side.

They found the chapel and the man of God.
From Perin's hair they washed the forest mold
And lapped his body in the linen smooth
And laid him deep beneath the chapel floor.
Bayberry tapers burned about the grave
Where Nerys watched the day and weary night
Until her eyes were dull, her lips were pale.
Before her stood Sir Balin.

Meantime over the hill beside the castle
A rout of hunters poured, the deer hounds first,
Low running silhouettes, and after these
On dancing horses, lady, lord, and squire
Over the crest, against the sunset red,
Then streaming into evening mist all colors
Were blurred, crimson, yellow, purple and green
Like a garden under shadow.

Pine Cone's Log of Literature & Art

New Signposts

In a recent number of the English Review, Huntly Carter, who has just returned from Russia, outlines the beginnings of the proletarian theater conducted by Meyerhold. Somewhat the method of the Commedia d'el Arte is used, the script of the drama is ignored and the play must shape itself as it moves along by a co-operation between the players and the audience. To quote from Mr. Carter's article, "The Department of Popular Enlightenment (of Soviet Russia), the workers, and the proletariat have between them invented and established a new form of play which pleases, attracts, and corresponds to the people, and to which the people contribute improvised speech and action."

Here is something for Carmel to think about and perhaps experiment with in its theater. We have already had two winters of successful Commedia d'el Arte; we also have a highly intelligent audience more than usually intimate with play itself. There is the chance to unite these two elements—the opportunity to work out something dramatically new to America—and maybe to be the first in the field. Consider "The Rented Ranch" and its unusual technique. It might be the connecting link or a significant signpost pointing the way.

Guided Strikers

Rumor has it that Sam Hume is in the midst of a crippling rebellion, that most of the supporters of his Theater Guild have seceded from that dramatic union. The rebels have been joined by Mr. Von Neumeyer, professor of public speaking and dramatic expression of the University of California, and together they will open a repertory theater in Berkeley. The cause of the dissatisfaction given is Mr. Hume's arbitrary despotism and the feeling that Mary Morris has been given an undeserved prominence. However, good luck, say we to Sam Hume. And good luck to Mr. Pichel and Mr. Von Neumeyer.

End of Free Verse in Sight

Theodore Maynard has an interesting article on this year's poetical output in the literary section of the San Francisco Chronicle last Sunday. He claims that "the end of Free Verse is not yet, the end of Free Verse as an active nuisance has arrived". He thinks that the newest poetic form will not be free verse; it is more likely to be blank verse.

It is a pity that Carmel did not hear more of Theodore Maynard last summer. That he was willing to give to the community was evident in the help he gave to the Mission Play. The fact that he managed to stay here a good many months without being found out by the Arts and Crafts lecture committee proved again that we are not all as wide awake as we think we are to the opportunities of literary life and its stimulus in Carmel.

Art Fair in April

The San Jose branch of the American League of Pen Women are to hold an art fair in April at Hotel Vendome. Mrs. James Swinnerton is to be its chairman. Recalling the charm of the book fair given in May and wishing to acquaint the public with the work of California artists as they did of California authors, plans are already under way for this distinctive event.

Paintings, pottery and art crafts, the work of Californians, will be exhibited. An artists' luncheon will be held, and the honor guests will include artists, art critics and sculptors.

Carmel's Beauties Poetized

Miss Louise Edgar Peters, whose new book has just been brought into the Pine Cone, spent the month of August in Carmel. The book is verse and the name of it "Pigeons of St. Mark's." It is published by the Fellowship Press Service, New York. Miss Peter's book, as she herself announces in the foreword, is an attempt to put into words what she sees as the solution of the problem of religion and science and to express that solution in verse. That portion of the book called "Songs of the Unchurched" is in form potentially dramatic. In the title of one poem—"The Monterey Cypress"—we have evidence of her stay in Carmel. It begins: "I am the indomitable one, supreme Above disaster. Blow on blow may fall, I stand erect, head high, eyes clear, and call On God whose child I am to prove the dream Of man's divinity."

Splashes and Splutter

Illinois is using its photographers in a novel way. It is making them into detectives of beautiful scenery. To arouse interest in this beauty hunt it announces a photographic contest. From the pictures sent in, one hundred beautiful spots in Illinois are to be chosen for marking by the art extension committee of the University of Illinois.

More and more we are becoming known both to artists and to the people at large. The San Francisco Art Association is now exhibiting in the Palace of Fine Arts. In this gathering together of the work of the best artists in the west you will find that no less than thirteen painters out of the eighty-six represented, have come to the Monterey peninsula for material and inspiration. Twenty-five paintings, some extraordinarily good, are the result. This is a sowing that augurs well for next year's artistic crop.

Don Jacinto Benevente, the Shakespeare of Spain, has won the 500,000 francs Nobel prize for literature in the year 1922. America has not been behind in acknowledging this master talent. His many books of plays are always to be found in the libraries; Miss O'Neil starred in two of the plays and the famous "Bonds of Interest" was put on by the New York Guild. "Bonds of Interest", by the way, was almost produced by the Forest Theatre. The lack of a suitable actor to play an exceedingly difficult leading part stood in the way.

Planets Named After the Gods. The planets derived their names from the mythological gods or goddesses.

Carmel is Coming Craft Center

For many years, East Aurora, N. Y., has been the seat of fine craftsmanship; Carmel bids fair now to be its worthy western rival. Hobart Glassell of "Cabbages and Kings" is the pioneer of the weaving industry in Carmel. His shop was started about a year ago. From the beginning he dealt in woven fabrics, but not satisfied with the part of the middle man, and wanting to put his customers in direct touch with the producer he conceived the idea of bringing to Carmel the spirit of the Roycrofters, of reviving that ancient and beautiful industry of weaving and of importing the finest yarns from Scotland for that purpose.

Mrs. Frances Glassell was no less interested than he, and it resulted in a summer spent in Berkeley and special training in that branch of work. Mrs. Glassell has a rich background of experience which she draws on for her artistic creations and colorful designs. She has spent years in the study of color, dyes and textiles, and before her marriage was one of our rarely beautiful interpretative dancers. She is now designing and weaving scarfs, hats, sweaters and many other articles for personal and household use. Many are done in quiet tones; others are rainbow-hued; they all have a soft and wonderful texture.

Shortly after Mrs. Glassell began to take orders it was quite evident that another weaver would be necessary to keep up with the growing demand. Mr. Glassell was fortunate enough to secure Mrs. Iris Alberto, who was able to impart much of her own charm and originality to this work. Mrs. Alberto is from Sweden. She has studied this craft from childhood in a country where every woman makes her entire trousseau by hand. During the last fall, a third weaver, Miss Lillian Andrews, was added to the establishment. It is a great pleasure to visit "Cabbages and Kings" and watch these interesting women with graceful fingers, weaving the soft wools into things of beauty.

Under a beautiful pine tree on the corner of Dolores and Ocean Avenue is a little country cottage of North European architecture. This, too, is devoted to the weaving industry and Mrs. Ruth Kuster is its dainty hostess. She, too, secured her training in Berkeley and her work displays much individuality with both taste and charm. Her assistant, Mrs. McCreery, studied this branch of craftsmanship during the war, and in connection with her work with the Little Theater movement, has become a specialist on fabrics and textiles.

Much interest is shown in the two coverlets over a hundred years old and in a state of perfect preservation. After the holidays, Mrs. Kuster is going to specialize in the weaving of fine linen for luncheon sets, collar and cuff sets and similar articles.

She has a permanent exhibit of her work in the Fairway at the St. Francis hotel, which attracts much attention from beautifully gowned women who are looking for distinctive personal belongings. Mrs. Kuster is using Carmel as headquarters for what promises to be a growing and lucrative business.

Fine needlework and individual designing are no less dignified a craft than weaving. These go with the Cinderella Shop. Mrs. James Gartland has recently taken charge of the sewing department. She is lately from Pasadena and Long Beach, but formerly conducted an establishment on Fifth Avenue, New York. She is an expert seamstress and will give particular attention to the designing of women's and childrens garments.

The Cinderella Shop is really a woman's exchange. Food stuffs are supplied by experts in cookery. Many lovely things are left there for sale, such as the beautiful Paisley shawls, worn by the women in "Cranford". Then there are rag rugs, "candlewick" bedspreads made by the poor people of the south, antique silver sets and woven scarfs and smocks from Greenwich village.

Etchings and photography though approaching the fine arts, are in one sense a craft. Lewis Josselyn and L. S. Slevin are experts in photography, their subjects being largely chosen from scenes in this vicinity. Mr. Slevin does a large business in the development of prints and handles books and works of art, and conducts a news agency.

Some of Mr. Josselyn's photographs are as beautiful as etchings. At this season of the year he gets out special mounted pictures of local scenes, art calendars and the like.

Ferdinand Burgdorff and Cornelius Botke are showing some new and beautiful etchings in Miss Polak's shop. There is an original treatment of the Mission done by Mr. Botke, which is attracting widespread attention, and Mr. Burgdorff is showing an etching of the old "Sherman Rose" building and wall, which will reach its greatest value in the years to come when the original will be no more.

In the Seidenbeck's studio on Dolores and Ocean Avenue can be seen beautiful designs in hammered brass and copper, tooled and modeled leather, all done by Catherine Comstock Seidenbeck, who received her training from Franz for many years associated with the Roycrofters. Mrs. Seidenbeck has an overmantel decoration of modeled leather done in the peacock design. It was given a prominent place in the P. P. I. E. and a special mantel was built for it. She also does handmade jewelry and many of the allied crafts.

Carmel is a very strong nucleus for becoming the home of craftsmanship. In a few years it will probably be known as much for that as it is now known as a center of art and letters.

THE PRESIDENT ASKS FOR LAW ENFORCEMENT

Solemnly and impressively warning the Nation of the dangers of contempt for law, President Harding, in his recent address to Congress, called for strict and literal enforcement of and compliance with the national prohibition statute—an enforcement so rigorous that it will determine whether public sentiment demands a modification of the Volstead act.

No more general manifestation of accord was elicited from the Senators and Representatives by the utterances of the President than by his assertion that "the men who are rending the moral fiber of the Republic" by flouting the prohibition law are setting an example and breeding a contempt for law "which will ultimately destroy the Republic."

Harding called the conditions relating to enforcement of the Volstead act a national scandal and "the most demoralizing factor" in our public life.

Instead of disappearing from politics the liquor question now dominates politics and distracts and confuses the electorate.

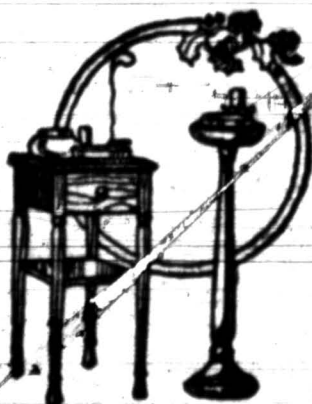

The Eighteenth amendment is unlikely ever to be repealed.

HELP—DON'T HINDER—HOLDING OF HAPPY HOLIDAY HIGH-JINKS

The Arts and Crafts Club have set the Christmas spirit pace for the rest of us. Let us not be behind them in our efforts to make this Christmas the happiest family party Carmel has known. Remember what fun the May Day was? And remember how many more of us wished we'd taken an active part in it? Christmas will be even more fun, and Carmel will be even more a united family if the side lines are thinner and the active workers more numerous. Don't sit off in your own little house by your own fireplace and make complacent though unkind remarks over a cup of tea about the individuals who are trying to Make Carmel a happy, united community. You are hindering a good deed if you do that. You are denying the spirit of Christmas. And you are holding back the growth of Carmel toward a happy dwelling place. Make your own unmatched contribution toward a community celebration.

Pine Inn Resumes Place as Town's Social Life Center

The old days have come again to Pine Inn. Mr. and Mrs. Jordan are quietly and unostentatiously attracting to their hostelry the old Carmel crowd. No longer is Pine Inn known as merely a place for the transitory tourist to lay his head and snatch a meal before finding a cottage. The home-like lobby, the cheerful grate fire and the social atmosphere makes of it a real home where the newcomer is apt to unpack his trunks with a sigh of relief and settle down to a prolonged visit.

The townspeople too are once more beginning to make the Inn a gathering place for their social diversions. This was evidenced by the popularity of Mr. Jordan's recent dinner dance, when the dining room was filled to its capacity. A good orchestra furnished the jazziest of the jazz and many dancers enjoyed the dizzy whirl until after midnight.

And now, when John B. stands at his door in costume—of course he must be in costume—to welcome the Twelfth Night revelers, the spirit of carnival will once more be loosed in a Carmel that will forget feuds and bickerings and will join in such a community celebration as will place the stamp of individuality not only on Carmel but on Pine Inn and on the Jordans.

The Twelfth Night revel will probably be an annual affair and will attract as many people here as the Forest Theatre plays do in the summer.

School Districts Unite

At a recent election held in Mission and Soberanes school districts, in this county, the patrons voted to consolidate, and after July 1, 1923, the students will all attend the Mission school, where two teachers are employed. The vote was unanimous. Every time a consolidation of this nature is consummated, talk is revived concerning the consolidation of Sunset, Bay and Carmelo schools.

Hearst Holdings on New Coast Highway Constitute an Empire

A contemporary announces that William Randolph Hearst has recently added from thirty-five to forty thousand more acres of land to his holdings down San Simeon way. The new deal is being made under the name of the Piedmont Land and Cattle Company with representatives of the Mayo Newhall estate, for property adjacent to San Simeon, the site of Hearst's new home, which architects have announced will cost the publisher in the neighborhood of a million dollars, and when completed will probably be the most sumptuously appointed mountain home and largest singly owned hunting preserve in the entire United States.

Recent purchases have been the Kron Tanning Company property of ten thousand acres and the Andy Molari and Mrs. Cooper-Hughes holdings of an equal area. These with others previously acquired are said to have brought Mr. Hearst's total holdings close to 200,000 acres, all closely bordering the new Carmel-San Simeon highway. Realty men profess to see a plan of the Hearst buyers to encompass the Monterey national forest, thus providing him with a vast preserve of his own, augmented by the federal property.

Another paper states that Mrs. Cooper denies that she has ever thought of selling her interests, and states that she has never even been approached in the matter. In principle, she is opposed to the gobbling tactics used by Hearst and would not be a party to it.

Japan's Poetic Contest

Japan seems to have the secret of keeping up with the times while still holding fast to the romance of ancient days. In the old times only poets and court nobles could take part in the yearly contest of verse and now the lists are open to both nobles and commoners. "Mountain Cloud at Dawn" is the typical poem in itself subject chosen this year by the emperor for the poetry contest. It would be interesting to know the result of the contest—if the winner and the leading poet in Japan is to be a court minstrel or a peasant.

Stewart Edward White's Latest

Stewart Edward White, nature writer and novelist, whose great novel on early San Francisco entitled "The Gray Dawn", has recently been dramatized for the screen, received the bookreading public at Paul Elder's early this week. His new book, "Daniel Boone, Wilderness Scout," is a leading success of this season.

Cowell Leaves for Europe

Henry Cowell, the Paderewski of California, is engaged for a tour of Europe for a series of performances, using his own unique methods and productions. It is not generally known that Mr. Cowell is on his mother's side a direct descendant of the noted Dean Swift. Mrs. E. R. Veblen, his foster mother, lived for many years in Carmel. Mr. Cowell has left the Pacific Coast for New York and for his European trip.

California's Agricultural Wealth Approximates Three Billion Five Hundred Million Dollars

Here are facts about California which should make every one of her citizens prouder than ever before of this Commonwealth.

And they should be sent broadcast over the United States so that citizens of other States may more fully appreciate the wonders of California.

Here is a State that is 780 miles long and from 150 to 350 miles wide, with a total area of 158,297 square miles, nearly as great as the combined area of New York, Ohio, Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and New Jersey.

Within its boundaries lie the highest and lowest points in the States. Mount Whitney rises 14,502 feet above sea level, while Death Valley sinks almost 400 feet below sea level.

And here are mountains, rich in mineral and timber resources, valleys of amazing fertility, world-famous harbors, cities teeming with industrial activity, lovely homes and contented people.

Agricultural Income $700,000,000

Of the fourteen leading counties in the United States in total value of crops, seven are California counties.

The total annual income from the field and tree crops of this State is $587,600,591. Dairying adds an income of $99,004,358.

Though probably as famous for her oranges as for any other single product—California's oranges bring her over $50,000,000 annually—this State also raises many millions of dollars' worth of peaches, prunes, apples, apricots, walnuts, pears, plums, lemons, cherries, almonds, grapefruit, figs and olives.

Here grow the earliest and latest fruit crops of the country; and more winter fruits and vegetables than in all the rest of the United States combined.

California's vineyards return to her citizens over $92,000,000 per year for raisins and grapes.

California's field crops bring great wealth, too. California has been the leader in the raising of barley since 1852, and her annual income from this crop aggregates nearly $30,000,000.

California is the second largest hay and rice growing State in the Union. The former returns over $100,000,000 a year and the latter over $11,000,000.

Great crops of wheat, corn, oats, beans, cotton, tobacco, hemp, rye, potatoes, sugar beets, melons and garden truck are harvested every year and add their millions to California's wealth.

Farm Values Increasing

A study of comparative figures reveals the fact that though the average size of farms is decreasing, the average value of farms is rapidly increasing. Note these figures:

Average acreage per farm:	1920	1910	1900
All land.....	249.6	316.7	397.4
Improved land.....	100.9	129.1	164.9

Average value per farm:	1920	1910	1900
All farm property..	$29,158	$18,308	$10,980
Land and buildings..	26,122	16,447	9,759
Implements and machinery.....	1,156	414	294
Live stock.....	1,879	1,447	928

Another important factor in California's agricultural wealth is an enormous investment in live stock which totals over $200,000,000. The investment in poultry runs over fifteen million dollars; more than eight million dollars' worth of eggs alone were shipped from California in a recent year.

Three billion five hundred million dollars is the agricultural wealth of California and she has great additional wealth in her natural resources and her growing industries.

WHEN HEARTS ARE TRUMPS

Tragedy if Child Should Have Christmas Come and Go Without an Ecstasy.

IF YOU have no child of your own, you must borrow or beg one for Christmas eve; for it is the time when the world lights its happiness with a child's joy, writes Dr. James I. Vance, in the Illinois State Journal.

Only a child may have the right of way on Christmas eve. If you do not stand in with the children, you must stand aside.

It is the hour when the world makes a cradle its shrine; when not only wise men from the East, but grown-ups from all points of the compass slip down over the hills of memory toward childhood's dawn, saying under their breath: "We have seen his star in the East and are come to worship him."

What a wonderful thing is this yearning of the old world for the happiness of children that climaxes at Christmas! The better side of human nature comes to the front. We throw off our cynicism. Meanness is shamed into generosity, and for a little while on Christmas eve the tightwads of earth have a look in on paradise.

Was there ever a sweeter eagerness, a holier joy, a more heavenly anticipation, than that which all through the house is felt on Christmas eve? Every one is thinking of making somebody happy. The delicious secretiveness of it intensifies the thrill. Care is forgotten. Expectation is ringing the bells. Peace is over all the world. And the hero is a child.

Thank God for children: "Of such is the kingdom of heaven." It is a sin to disappoint a child. Then it must please God when we make the children happy.

If there is no child in your home, maybe there is one on your doorstep, waiting for you to be its saint on Christmas eve. There are certainly some there in the street. They are looking at the toys in the window with wistful faces, and wondering what the lover of children will bring them. It is your time to play, and hearts are trumps!

What a tragedy if a single child in your town should have Christmas come and go without an ecstasy!

Christmas Cookies.

Cream together two cupfuls brown sugar and one-half cupful butter. Add one well-beaten egg, eight tablespoonfuls sweet milk, one saltspoonful salt, one-half teaspoonful soda dissolved in one-eighth cupful boiling water, one teaspoonful cinnamon, 2½ cupfuls rolled oats, two cupfuls flour. Mix all together and let stand for an hour, then drop a teaspoonful at a time on greased tins. Press a fat raisin on the top of each and bake in a moderate oven. This amount makes about four dozen cookies.

A Christmas "Suppose"

WE would not change the children's Christmas. But suppose all the grown-up people were to say to one another: "This year, instead of my giving you a present and your giving me a present, let us club together and give our present to some poor child who will not have any Christmas. There are hundreds of them somewhere. Or, if we do not know of such a child, let us give our present to a hospital for children, a home for crippled children, for incurables, for the aged, the blind, the feeble-minded." This to be, of course, in addition to what we usually give to charities at this season. Why could we not try this as an experiment, and see what the result would be?—Christian Register.

BELIEFS OF THE PEASANTS

Odd Christmas Superstitions Handed Down From Past Ages to the Ignorant Europeans.

THE peasantry of Europe have had certain Christmas superstitions handed down to them from past ages. Just how far these simple folk can be fooled is to be wondered.

If the light is let go out on Christmas morning, you will see spirits.

If you are born at sermon time Christmas eve, some one in the house will die within the year.

If you steal hay the night before Christmas, and give the cattle some, they will thrive and you will not be caught in any future thefts.

If you eat a raw egg, fasting on Christmas morn, you can carry heavy weights. It is unlucky to carry anything from the house on Christmas morning until something has been brought in.

It is unlucky to give a neighbor a live coal to kindle a fire with on Christmas morning.

If the fire burns brightly on Christmas morning, it betokens prosperity during the year; if it smolders, adversity.

If a dog howls the night before Christmas, it will go mad within the year.

If you steal anything at Christmas without being caught, you can steal safely for a year.

On Christmas eve thrash the garden with a flail, with only your shirt on, and the grass will grow well next year.

Tie wet strawbands around the orchard trees on Christmas eve and it will make them fruitful.

On Christmas eve put a stone on every tree, and they will bear the more.

Beat the trees on Christmas night, and they will bear the more.

If after a Christmas dinner you shake out the tablecloth over the bare ground under the open sky, crumb-worm will grow on the spot.

If on Christmas day or eve, you hang a washcloth out on the hedge, and then groom the horses with it, they will grow fat.

As often as the cock crows on Christmas eve, the quarter of corn will be as dear.

If you burn elder on Christmas eve you will have revealed to you all the witches and sorcerers of the neighborhood.

Lines to Be Remembered.

When fortune brings thee affliction, console thyself by remembering that one day thou must see prosperity and another day thou must see difficulty.—The story of the Porter and the Ladies of Bagdad in The Arabian Nights.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC REPLIES TO U. P.

FIGURES MADE PUBLIC SHOW SUPERIOR EFFICIENCY OF S. P. OPERATION

In answer to criticisms by Union Pacific representatives that the Southern Pacific has neglected to make proper improvements on the Central Pacific, J. H. Dyer, general manager of the Southern Pacific Company, has issued the following statement:

"The charge of the Union Pacific that the Southern Pacific has failed for the last ten years, during the period of litigation, to make proper improvements on the Central Pacific and the declaration that Union Pacific management would mean more improvements and greater development, are best answered by the facts.

"It is true that during the period of litigation improvements on the Central Pacific Railroad have been made sparingly. This was dictated by sound business judgment, and no other course could have been justified to the 54,000 owners of the company's stock.

"Improvements such as the proposed new depots at Reno and Sacramento, and extensive double tracking programs were put aside until the relations between the Southern Pacific and Central Pacific should have been established on a basis which would safeguard the investment. In spite of the cloud of litigation, however, no expense has been spared to keep the Central Pacific in the highest condition of operating excellence, every safeguard for traffic has been installed, only the heaviest type of rails has been laid, and in the matter of general equipment the only measure has been the highest standard.

Medium for Comparison

"Comparisons are odious, but it was the Union Pacific that insisted on bringing this element in the controversy. The Oregon Short Line, extending from Ogden toward Portland, is a Union Pacific property, which in location and mileage affords a very good medium for a comparison between Southern Pacific and Union Pacific stewardship.

"During 1921 the additions and betterments on the Oregon Short Line totaled $1,134,816.67. During the same period the Southern Pacific, in spite of the cloud on its title, spent $2,937,267.96 in additions and betterments on the Central Pacific.

"That the public has benefited proportionately by these expenditures may be estimated from a comparative record of Southern Pacific and Union Pacific service.

"During 1921, only 73.2 per cent of the Union Pacific passenger trains were on time, whereas 93.9 per cent of the Central Pacific passenger trains were on time.

"During 1921, 79 per cent of the through freight trains were on time on the Union Pacific, as against 91 per cent punctuality of the through freight trains on the Central Pacific.

"During 1921, 60 per cent of the perishable fruit trains of the Union Pacific were on time, against 90 per cent on time on Central Pacific.

"Central Pacific-Southern Pacific locomotives, notwithstanding heavier grades, ran 9.5 per cent more miles daily than did those of the Union Pacific, and consumed 10.5 per cent less fuel per ton mile.

"During the recent shopmen's strike the Southern Pacific-Central Pacific annulled no passenger trains, whereas the Union Pacific were unable to move passenger trains for four days.

Annual Expenditures

"During Union Pacific control the average annual expenditure in improvements and extensions on the Southern Pacific-Central Pacific was $7,600,000. Since the relinquishment of control by Union Pacific the Southern Pacific-Central Pacific has expended annually over $13,000,000 in extensions and improvements, notwithstanding the war period, when all improvements were curtailed. In other words the Southern Pacific has expended annually in improvements about double the amount which had been expended annually during Union Pacific management.

"The Southern Pacific has just bought additional freight equipment to the extent of seven million dollars, and in addition is paying one-half the cost of 5,000 refrigerator cars which will be operated by the Pacific Fruit Express—one-half of which is owned by the Union Pacific.

"In 1923 the total additional refrigerator cars available to the Pacific Fruit Express over and above those owned by it October 1, 1922, will be 8,700, representing an investment of nearly 25 million dollars.

Future Improvements

"In spite of the litigation which has menaced the Southern Pacific's title to the Central Pacific, the Central Pacific has been maintained in a standard of efficiency which has enabled it to render public service far better than that given by the Union Pacific. Once our title to this property is assured, or the investment safeguarded, major improvements, for which the plans have long been ready, will go on on an unprecedented scale, and the Southern Pacific-Central Pacific main lines will be far ahead of any other railroad system in the west, not only in equipment and service as they are today, but in double tracks and with the finest depots and terminals."

I Thank You

If "Spreading the News" made a beautiful picture, it was on account of the lighting effects produced by Edward Kuster and Lewis Josselyn.

If the setting was quaint and picturesque, the credit is due to Dr. A. E. Burton.

If the costumes were colorful and appropriate, Mrs. Rhoda Johnson should be complimented.

If the make-up contributed to the success of the performance, Hobart Glassell and Constance Heron were the artists.

If there was no prompting evident, it was because Mrs. Burton did her work efficiently.

If the cast put over the plot, it is because they were talented, intelligent, and worked with cooperation and loyalty.

To all of these dear people I wish to publicly acknowledge my debt "May their shadows never grow less."

Pine Needles

Miss Gwendolen Perfy has come to Carmel to spend the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Fitzgerald were here a few days this week from Los Angeles.

Oakland people recently registered at La Playa were Dr. and Mrs. Leonard Woods.

Mrs. Mary Hammond and Miss Florence Olney of Berkeley are spending two weeks in Carmel.

Mrs. M. Coote departed this week for Los Angeles to visit her daughter, Mrs. M. E. Little, for a few months.

Former Carmelites here recently were Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Rockwell. They are now making their home in Pasadena.

Miss Marjory Lynch, special agent of the State Welfare Commission, is in town for a few days with her friend Miss Edith Jamieson of Alameda.

George L. Carroll of Pebble Beach and Carmel has let the contract for his new eight-room $10,000 stucco home in Pebble Beach. Fred Ruhl is the builder.

Several new business concerns are to be opened up in Carmel the first of the year. It is also stated that a Monterey dry goods store will open a branch here.

Rumor has it that efforts are being made to have reduced the rate on express coming directly into Carmel. Most people agree that the present rate is excessive.

Three Carmel ladies have taken apartments for the winter in the same building in San Francisco. They are Mrs. Florence S. Brown, Mrs. Mary Stuhler and Mrs. Dorothy V. Wegg.

Mrs. Clara B. Lawler, who has an exhibition of Oriental goods at La Playa, will leave Carmel for the Xmas holidays. Some of her articles will be placed in Ye Olde Shop on Lincoln street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gaylord of St. Louis, who spent last winter in Carmel and made many warm friends here, have returned for another several months and have taken one of the Comins cottages.

Articles of partnership entered into in 1915 between David Schwartz and Mrs. J. L. Blum, under the firm name of The Arcade, were filed in County Clerk's office last week. The life of the agreement is ten years.

Mrs. Kate C. Wood, who spent several months here two years ago, arrived here last Tuesday evening from Honolulu. She is the sister of Mrs. Rose J. DeYoe and of Mrs. Lillie Hanson and a cousin of J. F. Devendorf. Mrs. Wood's daughter, Mrs. David Larsen, is living in Honolulu, but is expected here in the spring. She will be remembered as having played the leading role in "The Man From Home" at our Forest Theatre. Mrs. Wood will remain indefinitely.

Mrs. Charlotte McCrary had as week-end guest her cousin, Miss Jane Hoehn.

Van Wyck Brooks returned recently from San Francisco and on Thursday departed for New York.

Josephine Rand Rogers spent this week in her cottage on the Point. She expects to enjoy the holidays here with her family.

On Sunday, December 24th, it is announced that a missionary playlet will be presented at the Carmel Church by the missionary class.

Harvey A. Russell and his daughter are leaving today for Madera, where they will spend the holidays at El Adobe Rancho. They will visit in Los Angeles before returning here.

Chaplain Joseph Clemens, U. S. A. retired, who has been here several weeks, has sailed for the Philippines with his wife. Upon their return from the islands, they will make their home here.

The dangerous curve at San Carlos and Eighth avenues has been altered and repaired, so that pending completion of the Ocean avenue improvement, Eighth avenue will be the cross-town thoroughfare.

Until further notice Carmelites will have to go over the hill for their moving pictures. The Manzanita Theatre is closed. Manager George Kinloch is showing two and sometimes three different shows a night in Monterey.

The Monterey Peninsula Outdoor Circle's campaign to eliminate advertising signs on highways, byways and on adjoining private property is meeting with approval in many quarters. "Signless Scenery" is their slogan.
